Whereas, President Roosevelt has signified his purpose of making a trip through the South during the month of October next, and the Mayor of Richmond has extended to His Excellency an invitation to include this city in his itinerary; and

Whereas, it behooves all municipal, civil and other representative organizations to manifest their cordial and hearty approval of the presence of the nation's chief magistrate in our midst; therefore, be it

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
LYNCHBURG, VA., June 8.—In a plain, practical and modest talk, Lieutenant-Governor Joseph E. Willard captured a large audience at the Academy of Music to-night. There were several reasons why the audience was not larger, but it was large enough to delight Mr. Willard and his supporters, and at the close of the meeting many of the Lieutenant-Governor's friends expressed delight over the results, claiming that such a business-like talk could not but add greatly to his strength here.

The audience contained about a thousand persons, in which there were a number of ladies. On the stage nearly a hundred representative citizens from Amherst, Bedford and Appomattox counties, as well as Lynchburg, occupied seats. While there was a large number of old men in the crowd, there is no doubt but the younger element predominate in a considerable majority, evincing that a large number of the young men of the city are enthusiastic in their support of Mr. Willard.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. S. H. Miller, and Mr. Randolph Harrison, in a short but well selected talk, presented the speaker of the evening.

Won Admiration.
Mr. Willard spoke for an hour, during which time he had the closest attention of his audience. He spoke in a frank manner, which frequently elicited liberal applause, though it was an audience that could not be said to be a boisterous one. The speech was not one to cause any great hurrah, because it was so modest and so void of ostentation that more admiration was generated for the speaker than enthusiasm.

The effort was absolutely devoid of criticism of his competitors for the gubernatorial nomination, a fact that was most favorably commented upon by not a few persons after the close of the rally.

Mr. Willard made many friends by his visit to Lynchburg last night, and even if some of these do not vote for him, they cannot but feel kindly toward him. Mr.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 8.—The nominating committee appointed by the directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society to name a chairman of the board, who shall direct the affairs of the society, met to-day, but adjourned until to-morrow without definite action. It was learned, other than the official name of Judge George Gray, of Delaware, in connection with the chairmanship. It is understood that among the names under consideration to-day were those of Paul Morton, who is soon to retire as Secretary of the Navy, and General Horace Porter, former ambassador to France.

Among the developments of the day were the announced resignation of Robert T. Lincoln from the board of directors, the cancellation of a $50,000 policy by Melville E. Ingalls, recently resigned as a director, and a statement by Alvin W. Krech, president of the Equitable Trust Company, and a director of the Equitable Life, that there was no truth in the published report that the inquiry of the State Insurance Department would show a new imposture involving $10,000,000.

UNPARALLELED CONVENIENCE

The People Heartily Endorse Efforts of Times-Dispatch for Better Intercourse.

(Special From a Staff Correspondent.)
WINCHESTER, VA., June 8.—The more one sees of the Valley of Virginia the more one is impressed with the prosperity and wealth of this section of the State. The very villages have a substantial and prosperous appearance, and the farms are veritable garden spots. The only thing that seems to mar the almost perfect condition of affairs is the lack of railway and transportation facilities. On the trains, in hotels and on the streets one hears this one subject discussed more than any other. The fact that the Valley of Virginia is forced against its will to do business with the North to the exclusion of Virginia, trade is distasteful to every true son of the State. The Times-Dispatch and other papers of Virginia reach this section a whole day after they are printed, while the papers of the North arrive in Winchester shortly after breakfast time. A Chester banker and politician, in speaking of this, said: "I only take the Richmond papers when the Legislature is in session, for I don't want my news twenty-four hours late."

There is a strong sentiment here that vigorous action should be taken in the matter of bringing the different sections of Virginia into closer touch, and the City Council is not only willing, but anxious, to give the matters its official support.

The city of Winchester is almost unparalleled in the way of conveniences, public buildings and modern improvements that she possesses. With a population of six thousand people and with a tax rate of but eighty cents on the hundred, she can boast of better street improvements, water works and school houses than almost any other city in the State. The mere fact that ten per cent. of her total population, of men, women and children, are enrolled in the public school, shows what she is doing in the way of education. Perhaps, no city in the Old Dominion has a more interesting history than Winchester. Washington was here as a boy and later as commander-in-chief of the Continental army. Lord Fairfax maintained a residence, and General Daniel Morgan, of Revolutionary fame, engaged his Hessian prisoners in battle.

College Name.

His description of Randolph was worthy a place in literature, and was listened to with utmost interest. In regard to the reason for the name Randolph-Macon, the distinguished minister said:

"Our thoughts this evening go back full three-quarters of a century, to the time when this institution was yet an unaccomplished purpose in the minds of good men interested in the education of the youth of their country, and especially of their own Church. The conception which resulted in this college was first formed, so I am told, in Petersburg; and I would expect to find that the good man into whose mind it came had lived on Halifax Street, that long southwest road running down into North Carolina, to the town from which the street and road takes its name; and that as, week after week, he saw that sturdy but ill instructed population of the southern counties of Virginia, and the northern counties of North Carolina, driving their tobacco laden wagons along that Halifax road into his town, and go back with their homely provisions, he longed to set before them better opportunities and higher ideals. And there would come into his mind the fact that in the very sections of the two States to which that road led, there lived two old men, then approaching their last days, who were prominent types of personal integrity, intellectual culture and civic virtue. John Randolph, of Roanoke, and Nathaniel Macon, of Warren county, North Carolina, names which for a generation had been linked in inseparable friendship and in unflinching devotion to the services of their country, and fidelity to their own high ideals.

Perhaps the historians of the college have been disposed to make short work of the origin of the name. I have seen it described somewhat as a blundering attempt to avoid a denominational name, or perhaps it fully attempted to elicit the name of the man whose name was to be given to the college. But I am sure that when, in 1830, the college was authorized by charter, and, two years later, began its work, a more creditable motive prevailed with its founders. It is certainly not the case that neither of the men whose names the college bears were Methodists, and that it never received a dollar from either of them, but this very fact suggests that the motive lies deeper than either of the very obvious ones of money or a mere denominational interest. Certainly the names of either Methodist or money, but they did emphatically stand for great principles, personal, intellectual and political, and in giving this name to their college, destined for the education of young Virginians and North Carolinians, I believe the founders neither blundered nor made a futile attempt. It must be remembered that this old

The gem of eloquence and sublime rhetoric came this afternoon in the speech of Dr. C. Braxton Bryan, in the unveiling of the life-size portrait of John Randolph, of Roanoke, in the chapel. After Miss Virginia Fitzgerald had unveiled the fine painting Dr. Bryan presented the picture.

ELECTRIC PLANT IS DISCUSSED

Committees Receive Report of Their Sub-Committee.

MR. TRAFFORD EXPLAINS

Another Meeting Monday Night,
When Citizens Will Be Heard.

The Committees on Finance and Electricity, to which was referred the question of the advisability of the city constructing, operating and maintaining a municipal electric plant, met last night, received the report of the joint committee, heard Mr. C. W. Trafford at length in explanation, and decided to hold another meeting next Monday night, when the Water Committee will be called in conference, and when citizens will be invited to give their views on the proposition.

While the committee took no action looking to the adoption of the report, members did not mind stating that they were favorably impressed with the proposition as formulated by Mr. Trafford and adopted by the sub-committee.

Where the People Pay.

In dealing with the subject of the use of electricity in Richmond, the report says:

"From the best information which I can obtain, the amount annually expended by the people of Richmond and its immediate vicinity for electric current for light and power purposes (excluding the use of the street railways) is not more than $200,000.

"The total capacity of the electric generators used for commercial purposes installed in central stations, I place at 6,000 horse power.

"In addition to the above mentioned generators, there is installed in private plants an additional 2,880 horse power of electric generators.

"The actual maximum load which the central stations are required to put out at any time is about 4,000 horse power, exclusive of the power used for railway purposes.

"The difference between the 6,000 horse power of installed capacity, and the 4,000 horse power of maximum output, is accounted for by the necessity of maintaining steam reserve capacity in water power plants, due to the irregular flow of James River. Attention is called to the large quantity of machinery installed in private plants, amounting to nearly two-thirds as much as is operated in central stations for commercial use.

"The owners of these plants have deemed it expedient or economical to render themselves independent of the central station supply. More than one-half of the capacity of these plants has been installed within the past two years,

(By Associated Press.)
BERLIN, June 8.—Prince Leopold Von Hohenzollern, a cousin of Emperor William, who came to Berlin to attend the wedding of Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, died suddenly to-night of apoplexy.

The Prince will be remembered in history as the candidate of the Spanish Cortes for the throne of Spain, and as having been unwittingly the cause of the Franco-Prussian war. He lived at Sigmaringen, in the original principality of Hohenzollern.

Emperor William called at the house of the hereditary Prince William, where Prince Leopold died and expressed his condolences.

NORWAY MAY YET BE A REPUBLIC

King Oscar Refuses to Place
Younger Member of Family

(By Associated Press.)
COPENHAGEN, June 8.—It is reported that the Norwegian government, in view of King Oscar's apparently definite refusal to consider the offer of the Storting to place a prince of the House of Bernadotte on the throne, has privately approached the Danish royal family to ascertain if an offer of the throne would be received by a member of it, preferably Prince Charles, son of Crown Prince Frederick. The general opinion expressed here is that such an offer would be refused.

According to reports from Stockholm, King Oscar may be induced to reverse his decision, and favorably regard the offer of the throne for a member of his house.

Authoritative information received from Norwegian circles represents the majority of Norwegians as opposed to giving the throne to a prince of the house of Bernadotte. It is stated that if King Oscar should definitely refuse the throne for a member of his family, and that if the Danish royal family should likewise refuse to place one of its princes on it, Norway will become a republic, and that this is favored by the mass of the people.

All those in the civil service of Norway have announced their adherence to the new government, and all the generals have taken the oath of allegiance. The Associated Press learns that Crown Prince Gustave had a long interview on the crisis with Emperor William before he left Berlin, and that it is understood the Emperor is not unwilling to intervene in favor of the Swedish dynasty.

An authority intimately connected with the Emperor confirms a rumor that he has abandoned his trip to Norway at the request of Crown Prince Gust
